

IM Publications License Agreement–Username/Password

Electronic editions of IM Publications journals are available on the IM Publications web site (www.impublications.com). You have chosen to access the journal(s) you have subscribed to by username/password; this entitles you to access the journal(s) from any computer within or outside of your site. You undertake not to disclose this username/password to anybody outside those employed on your site and we require any other user on your site to observe the same conditions. We do not require at the moment any lengthy agreement or license to be signed by subscribers, but we will monitor developments with generic licensing schemes and may implement such a scheme in the future. Access will only be set up once payment has been received (new subscriptions) and this form has been completed and returned to us.

Our only requirement is that you inform your users of the following and that you undertake to make your best efforts to see that they comply:

'The electronic files provided for the web edition are copyrighted and should not be passed in any form electronic, paper, fax or other to any person outside your site. This means that you must not pass any such material, or the username/password, to people on other sites of your university or company'.

Please respect copyright and help us to continue to maintain fair subscription rates.
